

Travel · Destinations · Europe · United Kingdom · Articles

15 fun things to do in Britain this weekend

A preview earlier this month of the Canary Wharf Winter Lights exhibition CREDIT: GETTY

Discover extraordinary places to visit

Take a look at these incredible sights across the world, from Iguazu Falls to the Northern Lights Read more

Sponsored

By Telegraph Travel

20 JANUARY 2017 · 9:43AM

Still feeling blue? You're not the only one; this is, after all, the most depressing time of the year. But fear not because there are plenty of things happening in the UK this weekend to help you get through January...

6. Admire Canary Wharf's bright lights

As darkness descends on the city, lights will arise in Canary Wharf. Scattered across the district, some 30 installations forming a Winter Lights exhibition will showcase the playful (and occasionally interactive) works created by some of the creative world's most innovative light artists. Among the pieces on show are Cathedral of Mirrors, featuring reactive columns that intensify in lustre when more people gather, and the site-specific On Your Wavelength, a light sculpture controlled by spectators via an EEG headset that detects electrical activity in the brain.

An installation at the Canary Wharf Winter Lights exhibition CREDIT: GETTY

